DISCOVERING THE WORLD'S FRESHWATER ANIMALS

When children learn the names of animals, they become aware of the diversity of terrestrial animal species, including mammals. They find out very early that a dog is different from a cat, and even more so from a horse or an elephant. For fish, they often only know one word: «fish». Yet there are many more species of fish than species of mammals and they are much more diverse!

During a walk through the main freshwater ecosystems, children will be introduced to the extraordinary biodiversity of animals that are referred to as «fish», «frog», or «lizard». From one pool to another, they will discover the peculiarities of these species while developing their sense of observation and their sensitivity towards life.
